

Answer to question 1:

DP: If I thought that that was likely I wouldn't have gotten involved in this. I am persuaded that they are in a position where they need to recognise what's there and ... I mean they're hoping that it will all be nothing. I have doubts about that having read what's on your website, having had some preliminary discussion in other corners, it does begin to look as though there's problems there....um but that will only emerge if we have information and if there's no information forthcoming then we're not going to be able to report to any particular positive way... one way or the other... and indeed if we don't have information what will come back from the report is that there is no problem... and that's the danger... and on they'll go on their merry way.
