

Answer to question 2:

DP: I see us being given a dual role of dealing with systemic issues and dealing with individuals. But the commentary that we can make on systemic issues, is only capable of being derived from individuals. It, I mean it's no use somebody coming to us and saying there have been these long term problems without any sort of evidence because what we've got to be is an evidence based investigation and assertion by even the best intentioned people, and people may well believe it, telling us what their perception is, is not going to get anybody very far unless we can say, ah, and this document was sent by X to Y ah on such and such a day...
